PREFACE

This and the succeeding volume, which contain the analytical index to the preceding fifty-three volumes of The Philippine Islands: 1493-1898, bring the series to a close. Throughout the compilation of the index, the effort has been to furnish the investigator the most comprehensive guide to the material of the text. The multifarious interests treated in the various documents, touching as they do so many phases of human life and thought, and their complexity, together with all the elements usually present in the making of an index, have rendered this a task of considerable magnitude. Constant classification and anaylsis have necessarily been demanded to an unusual degree in the longer topics; and these, with the many thousands of minor citations, both concrete and abstract, and names of persons and places, with their numerous variants, have necessitated the utmost care in detail and arrangement. Considerable important additional information has been embodied in footnotes to several captions. Although still far short of their ideal, the editors are confident that the index will stand the test of use.

Wherever possible, matter has been collected under general heads, thus facilitating the work of investigation. All natural features have been collected under their appropriate captions as follows: Bays, Gulfs, and Harbors; Capes, Points, and Promontories; Islands [exclusive of the Philippines]; Lakes, Meteorology; Mountains and Hills; Oceans and Seas; Peninsulas; Rivers; Straits and Channels; and Volcanoes. Similarly, have been collected the various forms of animal life, thus: Birds; Fishes and Fisheries; Invertebrates; Mammals; and Reptiles. Certain products, both natural and the result of man's activity, fall into heads as follows: Clothing; Drugs; Dyes and Dyestuffs; Earthenware; Fibers; Furniture; Gems and Precious Stones; Gums and Resins; Hardware; Hides and Leather; Machines and Machinery; Manufactures; Mines and Mining (including Metals and Minerals); Nuts; Oils; Perfumes; Paints and Varnishes; Plants and Trees; Provisions and Supplies; Shells; Spices; Textiles; Tools, Implements, and Utensils; and Wines, Liquors, and Spirits. The following collected captions are of general human interest: Architecture; Archives and Libraries; Artisans; Books; Commerce; Diseases and Remedies; Games and Sports; Maps and Cartographers; Military Affairs and Allied Matters; Money; Music; Ornaments; Painting and Pictures; Periodicals; Physicians and Surgeons; Population; Prices; Salaries (including Wages); Ships, Navigation, etc.; Slaves and Slavery; Societies; Weights and Measures; and Workmen and Laborers. Affairs connected with government and politics form the following important divisions: Colonies and Colonization; Councils; Decrees; Encomenderos; Encomiendas; Expeditions; Insurrections (including Insurgents, Mobs, Mutinies, Rebellions, Revolts, Revolutions, Riots, and Seditions); Legal and Judicial; Offices; Officials; Penalties; Petitions and Memorials; and Revenue and Exchequer. Ecclesiastical affairs are treated under the following captions: Augustinians; Catholics; Christianity and Christians; Church (the); Confraternities and Brotherhoods, and Sodalities; Dominicans; Ecclesiastical Estate; Franciscans; Jesuits; Mahometans and Mahometanism; Martyrs and Martyrdom; Missionaries; Missions; Orders, Religious; Recollects; and Religious Persons. Cognate to these latter are: Education; Hospitals; Orders, Hospital; Orders, Military; and Saints. Lastly, the ethnological topics form another group of captions, chief among which are perhaps Chinese, Filipinos, Japanese, and Moros. Information concerning the various peoples of the Philippines will be found under the following captions: Abacas; Aetas; Apayaos; Attarayas; Babuyanes; Baganis; Bagobos; Balugas; Bangon; Batanes; Batanganes; Bilans; Blacks; Bukidnon; Bukil; Butuans; Calanasas; Calauas; Calingas; Caragas; Dadayags; Filipinos (including Bicol, Cagayan, Ilocan, Pampango, Pangasinan, Tagálog, Visayans — with the sub-peoples, Boholans, Calamianes, Cebuans, Dapitans, Harayas, Iguienes, and Panayanes — and Zambal); Gaddans; Guiangas; Guimbanos; Ibilaos; Ifugaos; Ifumangies; Igorot; Ileabanes; Ilongots; Irayas; Isinay; Italones; Itaves; Ituis; Loac; Mandayans; Manguangas; Mangyan; Manobos; Mestizos (mixed breeds); Monteses; Moros (including Camucones, Joloans, Lutaos, Mindanaos, Bajaw, Basilan, Illano, Lutangos, Malanaos, Sámal Laút, Sanguil, Sologues, Tiron, and Yakan); Negritos; Sameacas; Subanon; Tagabili; Tagacaolos; Tinguianes; Tiruray; and Ytingues. Peoples outside the Philippines are as follows: Alforas; Achenese; Arabs; Aragonese; Asiatics; Balinese; Barbudos; Berbers; Biscayans; Borneans; Bretons; British; Burmese; Cambodians; Caribs; Chamorros; Chinese; Cimarrons; Cochinchinese; Danes; Dutch; Europeans; French; Greeks; Huns; Huvas; Indians (including Algonquins, Apusabalcos, Aztecs, Brazilians, Caribs, Chichemecos, Chonek, Guarani, Hurons, Inaken, Iroquois, Mistecs, Moskito, Nahuatl, Patagonians, Tamoyos, Tehuel-Che, Tupi, Tzoneca, and Winnebago); Japanese; Javanese; Jews; Kafirs; Lascars; Malabars; Malays; Mexicans; Moluccans (including Ternatans and Tidorans); Moors; Morenos; Moriscoes; Mulattoes; Palaos; Papuans;

Persians; Peruvians; Poles; Polynesians; Portuguese; Sepoys; Seres; Siamese; Siaos; Spaniards; Swiss; Tartars; Turks; Venetians; and Walloons. Special attention is directed to various features of the following captions: Chinese (which contains the largest amount of material ever brought together in any index concerning that people); Commerce and Trade (especially in the Orient); Decrees (which, with much clearer arrangement than it, is the best supplement to the Recopilación de Leyes de Indias ever published); Ecclesiastical Estate (replete with matter concerning the status and working of the Catholic Church); Education; Filipinos; Legal and Judicial; Manila; Moros; and Philippine Islands.

For the sake of greater facility in investigation, some of the more complex captions are here synopsized according to the classification adopted for each one.
