ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Through this paper the writer wishes to express his sincerest appreciation and thanks to the Almighty Father for His blessings, guidance, and protection that He has given to the writer and his family during their study at Philippine Union College, especially during the writing of this work.

The writer is very grateful to Indonesian Union College Extension Pematang Siantar, North Sumatra Mission, West Indonesia Union Mission, and the Far Eastern Division of Seventh-day Adventists for their sponsorship and their financial support.

Special appreciation and thanks are due:

Dr. Maria G. Tumangday, his thesis director, for her willingness to give guidance and help whenever it was needed, although she had heavy work to be done at her office as Vice President for Academic Affairs, as well as in the college and graduate school.

Dr. Delfe B. Alsaybar, dean of the School of Education, for his encouragement and valuable suggestions when the writer needed him at any time in his office.

The members of the thesis committee--Mrs. Luz C. Tangalin, Dr. Samuel A. Ladion, Dr. R. G. Salamante, and Dr. Leonore E. Gensolin--for their suggestions and encouragement at different stages.

Mr. Arsenio C. Poblete, Jr., for his suggestions and review of the statistical treatment and computation in this study.

Dr. Esmeraldo A. de Leon, curator of the E. G. White Research Center, for his tactful approach and indirect suggestions regarding the improvement of this thesis at the very beginning of this work.

To all the presidents and educational directors of the union and missions of West Indonesia for their help in administering the questionnaire, and to all the Seventh-day Adventist elementary teachers of that territory who filled out the questionnaire.

Hilderia, the beloved wife of the researcher, who, despite her heavy college work, provided sufficient moral support and understanding during the study and writing of this work.

Nurhaida Rotua, Evangelis Nurcahaya, Sunny Amiruddin, and Nurti Raya Rosa Sinensis--his four lovely children--who in their tender years have provided inspiration and warmth during the busy terms of study.
